and after people had to be turned away from the sold-out performance in the Buxton International Opera Festival, the local paper wrote:

'Highlight of the Festival was the exuberant performance of 2 Murders & a Marriage - crazy, delightful scenarios sung and acted with sharply satisfying skill by the three singers, who all had a wonderful sense of comedy - even, one might say, farce. From the audience there could only be one response - long live THE WORKS, and come back very soon.'
